Emma Raducanu cae derrotada en el primer round del BR Open

The British tennis player Emma Raducanu fought back tears after her defeat in the first round of the BR Open on Tuesday night. Her adjusted defeat in three sets against Sofia Kenin at the Arthur Ashe Stadium, in the tournament that she dedicated three years ago, was even more painful given the tight match of the encounter.

Although Kenin, champion of the Australian Open 2024, had been in bad form before the last big slam of the year, she rose to the challenge of facing a standout opponent and played a great match.

Raducanu initially did not have a response, but she dragged the match back with her tenacity and fight. In the important moments, however, Kenin hit the ball with more freedom. She made Raducanu feel uncomfortable with her variety and she stayed firm at the end. However, the inevitable conclusion for Raducanu's defeat is that, although she fought hard and contributed to a high level of play, she simply did not have the best opportunities for success to skip four weeks of the North American tour of hard courts before the tournament.

Since April, when Raducanu won the title in Great Britain at the Billie Jean King Cup against France, she has been playing tennis of high quality. She had reached the quarterfinals or better in four tournaments and the fourth round of Wimbledon, defeating multiple top-10 players. But then, curiously, she decided to stop playing.

After her defeat in the quarterfinals in Washington on August 2, Raducanu opted for no jugar más hasta el BR Open. Al igual que los torneos de Italia y Francia que se perdió anteriormente en el año, su ranking no le permitió ingresar al cuadro principal de los eventos que se perdió y no recibió wildcards.

En cambio de tomar la oportunidad de caer y ganar más partidos de juego, Raducanu regresó a los esteriles y familiares alrededores del Centro Nacional de Tenis en Roehampton.

Antes del torneo, Raducanu había razonado, no por primera vez, que ella "siempre ha hecho las cosas un poco diferente" y su programación fue una de las maneras en que ella se ha diferenciado de otros jugadores. El éxito temprano de Raducanu claramente ha emboldecido su aproximación a su carrera, pero algunas de las decisiones que ella y su equipo han tomado parecen llevar un toque de arrogancia.

Watson admits she can't understand why Raducanu would skip Olympics

Los tenistas deben jugar partidos de tenis. La competencia regular da a los jugadores una mejor oportunidad de afilar su toma de decisiones, mantener la calma bajo presión y figurar cómo adaptar sus juegos a diferentes estilos de juego. Incluso Serena Williams, notoria por su programación escasa, pensó que no podía caminar a un torneo de grand slam y dominar sin ningún partido bajo su cinturón a menos que una lesión la dejara sin opción.
