Bryn Kenney defended himself against a stack of cheating accusations by a former member of his online poker stable in an interview with PokerNews's Sarah Herring on Tuesday. But questions remain about his past role with GGPoker as a consultant, and whether or not he directed his players to play manipulatively in order to boost tournament numbers and meet prize-pool guarantees.

Last week, poker pro Martin Zamani stirred up the poker world by accusing the world's biggest poker tournament money winner of running a poker stable that would work together, utilize real-time assistance (RTAs), and play in unethical ways that were "best for the team."

Amid the subsequent poker community uproar, Kenney reached out to Herring, who says she has been a close friend for about a decade, and sat with her on Tuesday for the interview, which was streamed live on YouTube.

Questionable GGPoker partnership

Herring attempts to unpack a lot in the one-hour, 18-minute interview with Kenney, which focuses on his partnership with GGPoker, how Kenney used his stable of players to help meet tournament and satellite guarantees, and how much Kenney was paid by GGPoker for his affiliate work.

Zamani

claimed Kenney earned upwards of R$2 million a week from GGPoker, a matter Kenney wouldn't address.

"I don't really see that as [having] merit to answer," Kenney said.

"That's, like, personal business I have with someone. I don't feel like there's any reason to answer that."

Kenney became a GGPoker ambassador in March 2024, but told Herring he was with the site from its start in 2024. In November 2024, he quit as ambassador but remained as a consultant, saying he helped "grow their site [and] grow their guarantees to run bigger tournaments" and "helped them scale their business into what they were when they started into what they are today.”

That work allegedly included scheduling tournaments and satellites, then directing his horses to register to help GGPoker meet the prize-pool guarantees.

According to Zamani, Kenney told his players to alter their play to extend a tournament’s time and allow more people to enter. He cites an example of one horse folding aces preflop three-handed to make a satellite last longer.

CardsChat emailed GGPoker to request an interview, and did not hear back prior to publication.

Kenney confirms and denies

Kenney denied several of Zamani’s allegations, saying that his horses did not use real-time assistance (RTA) software and that he never had access to anyone’s screens while they played using the program TeamViewer.

He did not deny, however, accusations about team members working together or ghosting, but said it only happened a few times over the years.

He did

confirm that he sent Zamani to a Las Vegas shaman who wanted to dose him with giant monkey frog poison, but denied he would bust his players down in stakes if they refused to follow his diet suggestions.

Poker vlogger Matt Berkey gave a “REACTION to Bryn Kenney Poker News Interview” on his OnlyFriends podcast, in which he tried to make sense of what he just heard:

“It has the least amount to do with cheating, but the most amount to do with nefarious activity, which is the idea of him, though no longer being a part of GG, still making a majority of his revenue from GG,” Berkey said. “Allegedly, he was on the hook for the prize pools and, allegedly, he was getting a big chunk, if not all, the rake in those early days of GG. So obviously, it’s not a traditional backing deal where your interest lies in them being profitable.”

Although Kenney was opaque with a lot of his answers, he made it clear how he sees himself in the pokerverse.

“I’m one of the most respected people in the industry for my word, for following my word,” Kenney said. “I see myself as the person who loves poker more than anyone in the world.”

Titulo Principal: La trayectoria política de Tim Walz, el compañero de fórmula de Kamala Harris

Tim Walz, gobernador de Minnesota, ha tenido un recorrido político que va desde ser un demócrata moderado hasta un gobernador que ha entregado una gran cantidad de victorias en políticas progresistas, lo que ha enojado a sus críticos.

La vida antes de la política

Walz nació en West Point, Nebraska, en 1964 y creció en pequeños pueblos de Nebraska antes de graduarse en una clase de 25 estudiantes en una escuela secundaria en Butte. Se alistó en la guardia nacional del ejército a los 17 años y sirvió durante 24 años antes de retirarse. Después de la muerte de su padre cuando tenía 19 años, su familia dependió de los beneficios de supervivencia de la seguridad social para mantenerse a flote. Walz se mudó y tomó algunas clases en Houston, Texas, antes de construir camas bronceadoras en Arkansas. Luego se mudó a Nebraska para asistir a la universidad en Chadron State College, donde se graduó en 1989.

Walz enseñó en China durante un año después de la universidad y regresó a Nebraska para enseñar localmente. Ahí conoció a su esposa, Gwen, también maestra, y se mudaron a Mankato, Minnesota, donde ahora tienen dos hijos, Hope y Gus. Walz fue parte del personal de fútbol que llevó a la escuela a un campeonato estatal en 1999 y fue el asesor de un nuevo capítulo de la alianza gay-heterosexual de la escuela en un momento en que los temas LGBTQ+ no eran aceptados por su propio partido, lo que demuestra sus credenciales progresistas.

El inicio en la política

Walz ha dicho que una experiencia llevando a estudiantes a ver un mitin de George W Bush, donde sus estudiantes fueron rechazados porque los organizadores creían que eran demócratas, lo llevó a buscar un cargo público. Primero se postuló para el Congreso en el distrito primero de Minnesota, que es republicano-inclinado, en 2006, derrotando al republicano incumbente en una sorpresa. Uno de sus primeros anuncios de radio destaca la pérdida auditiva que experimentó por usar armamento pesado en la guardia nacional y cómo los servicios médicos que accedió lo ayudaron a escuchar a su hija pequeña cantar en la mañana.

"Estoy postulándome para el Congreso porque creo que tenemos una obligación moral como país de asegurarnos de que cada padre pueda escuchar a su hija cantar - que cada ciudadano reciba los mejores servicios médicos que nuestra comunidad médica tiene para ofrecer", dice en el anuncio.

Su récord en el Congreso fue moderado. A menudo copatrocinó proyectos de ley con republicanos y fue uno de los pocos demócratas que votaron para mantener en desacato al entonces fiscal general Eric Holder en 2012. Es dueño de un arma y cazador, Walz anteriormente recibió respaldo y donaciones de la Asociación Nacional del Rifle y tenía una calificación A del grupo, que cayó a una F después de que donara las donaciones del grupo a la caridad y firmara medidas de control de armas como gobernador. Ha dicho que las matanzas masivas, como las de Las Vegas y en una escuela secundaria en Parkland, Florida, lo han convencido de la necesidad de mayores restricciones.

Walz apoyó al Obamacare y al Dream Act, y votó a favor de derogar la política anti-gay "no preguntes, no digas" de las fuerzas armadas.

El gobernador progresista

Walz ha demostrado ser un gobernador progresista durante su primer mandato, firmando una gran cantidad de leyes que mejoran la vida de las personas en Minnesota. Algunas de estas leyes incluyen:

- Protección de los derechos reproductivos
- Licencias familiares y médicas remuneradas
- Licencias de conducir para personas indocumentadas
- Comidas escolares universales
- Restauración de los derechos de voto de los exconvictos
- Una prohibición de la terapia de conversión

Estas leyes han ayudado a mejorar la vida de las personas en Minnesota y han establecido a Walz como un gobernador progresista.
