Aprende a mantenerte abrigado en el invierno con estos consejos de estilistas australianos

Aunque la jornada más corta del invierno ha quedado atrás, aún nos encontramos en medio de los meses más fríos del año y agregar calor a los outfits es una necesidad. En este momento, mi opción preferida es una fina buzo de cuello de tortuga de lana merina que uso debajo de todo, desde camisas hasta suéteres de cable de tres hilos. Pero eso solo porque el año pasado perdí mi bufanda preferida de todos los tiempos. Era una enorme bufanda de lana de yak de color marrón-grisáceo que lograba ser densa y liviana. Las otras bufandas de mi guardarropa, aunque hermosas, no se comparan.

Las bufandas siguen siendo una excelente manera de agregar calor a los outfits. A continuación, profesionales de la moda australianos comparten sus formas favoritas de usar bufandas en invierno.

Bufanda y capucha en uno

Jordan Turner muestra cómo convertir una bufanda larga en una capucha y bufanda en uno, creando el efecto de 'estar bajo mi edredón en la cama'

El escritor y dueño de librería Jordan Turner prefiere usar una bufanda envolviéndola una vez alrededor de su cuello, de modo que una extremidad cuelgue sobre su pecho y la otra sobre su espalda.

"Si es una mañana fría [mientras camino al perro], a veces la convierto en una bufanda y capucha en uno, creando una capucha con el medio de la bufanda y luego usando el mismo envoltorio una vez más. Si hace viento, haré dos [vueltas] para que ambos lados de la bufanda estén detrás de mí."

Una bufanda de seda debajo de una camisa de botones

La diseñadora de vestuario y estilista Maria Pattison opta por un look "lujoso" y "un poco romántico". Esto implica usar una bufanda de seda rectangular estampada debajo de una camisa de botones con un toque de la bufanda que sobresalga en el cuello. "Esto puede marcar una gran diferencia [calorías-wise] si quieres usar una camisa en invierno", dice Pattison.

Envuelve la bufanda alrededor de la parte posterior del cuello y cruza-la sobre el pecho para que se siente debajo de los botones de la camisa. Pattison dice que es mejor elegir un color que combine con el resto de tu atuendo. "Me gusta una bufanda de color crema con una camisa blanca", dice. "Pero un toque de color para resaltar tus ojos también es una buena idea aquí."

Agrega una cinturilla

La estilista Jessica Steuart-Hoyler prefiere usar una bufanda creando un envoltorio asimétrico alrededor del cuello y uno de sus hombros que luego se abrocha a la cintura. Este estilo funciona mejor cuando se BR "con volumen y propósito" de modo que la bufanda se siente "alta para protegerte de los elementos", dice.

Para crear este look, necesitas una bufanda sustancial, sobre tamaño con un poco de ancho y caída. Coloca la bufanda sobre tu hombro derecho de modo que casi toda la longitud esté en el frente de tu cuerpo. Luego, envuelve el extremo largo alrededor de tu pecho, sobre tu hombro izquierdo, alrededor de tu espalda y sobre tu hombro derecho y brazo superior. Esto debe revelar el ancho completo de la bufanda mientras cuelga en el frente del cuerpo.

"Agrego una cinturilla para mantener la bufanda en su lugar", dice Steuart-Hoyler. Coordina tu joyería y el hardware de la cinturilla con el color de la bufanda. Por ejemplo, "Hardware de plata en la cinturilla y toda la joyería de plata para complementar una bufanda gris."
