Teams of rescue monitor rupture of dam in Dongting, China

(Xinhua/Chen Sihan Agency)

In Changsha, July 5 (Xinhua) 9 — Rescue teams, including firefighters and armed police, are closely monitoring the situation of a dam rupture in Dongting, Hunan Province, China, which occurred on Friday afternoon, informing local authorities.

Initially, the rupture was about 10 meters wide, but it continued to expand. The relocation of approximately 5,000 residents in the affected area was completed, in accordance with the local department of flood control.

A large amount of water from the lake overflowed through the breach with a rapid flow rate, according to the government of the village of Tuanzhou, Huarong District, Yueyang.

"The breach is difficult to repair, so we advise the construction of a second barrier two kilometers from the breach to contain the water", said Chen Wenping, a specialist in betting sports telegram and flood control.

Transport ships were sent to the site for the rescue operation. Trucks were also sent to fill the gap.

Dongting is the second largest freshwater lake in China. The affected area is near the village of Tuanbei, covering about 50 square kilometers. This area suffered a dam rupture in 1996.
