Boulangers franceses buscan recuperar el título de la baguette más larga del mundo

During the last five years, the record for the longest baguette in the world belongs to the residents of a small town in France, not to a group of bakers 500 miles away in Como, Italy.

On Sunday, a group of 12 bakers from France had as their goal to remedy this, with plans to knead, shape and bake during at least eight hours on their way back to victory.

They gathered early in the morning in the commune of Suresnes, in the western suburbs of Paris, and prepared to beat the record established in 1993 of 132.62 meters -approximately the length of the arch of Wembley.

Although it is believed that about 320 baguettes are sold every second in France, the record in Italy in 2024 was the first time that the country was attributed the title of the longest baguette; in 2024, a baguette of 122 meters baked in the Expo in Milan was certified as a record.

"¿En Italia?" Dijo un local a Le Parisien esta semana mientras salía de una panadería, una baguette firmly under his arm. "That's too much. There is a record that should belong to us in France, it's that one."

The sentiment was echoed among the bakers who gathered in the terrace of the Fécheray in Suresnes, where their attempt at a record would be developed with a panoramic view of Paris and the Eiffel Tower in the background.

"I hope we can recover the record for France", wrote Sylvain Lecarpentier, one of the participants, in a message on social media before the event.

In a press release announcing the event, the organizers described the challenging task that the bakers faced. "The dough will be kneaded, shaped and baked in the place and then baked in front of the public in a rollable oven under a tent", they said. "It will be done according to the rules of the art, with flour, water, yeast and salt as the only ingredients."

El pan francés se enfrenta a una prueba de resistencia

The baguette, which must be at least 5 cm thick and as long as its length, is expected to tome alrededor de ocho horas para hornearse, agregó el comunicado.

Una vez horneada la baguette, será dejada a la discreción de los jueces de Guinness World Records para determinar si es suficiente para vencer el récord actual. La baguette se cortará después para ser compartida con el público, así como distribuida a las personas sin hogar en Suresnes.
